TROUBLE IN A BOARDING HOUSE. MAKE THINGS LIVELY.

Inmates of Claude Bertholette's boarding ! No. 104 West Thirty-third-st., were sadly demoralized yesterday, apparently because Mrs. Townsend Colwell, ranch on Friday, and bired a room on the second floor of the house. Judging from her own story, Mrs. Colwell has a charmed life, and her presence in any place is likely to cause misfortune to somebody. Her first husband, William Tilestone, one of the editors of "Forest and Stream," was killed in the Madison Sprare apburt. She has been shipwrecked three times, once in the Pacific Ocean, once on the coast of South Carolina and once in the Gulf Stream. A sweeping machine once dragged her by the foot along Seventhave, the distance of a block. Horses have thrown her from their backs and trampled on her. She has also had narrow escapes from death among the Indians on Western plains. It was not surprising. therefore, that she was prepared for an aecident when she unpacked her trunk in Bertholette's is ading-house and went down to supper on Friday evening.

Trouble began right away. Joseph Colesante, a French waiter, flew into a passion about something into the street. The offended waiter smaked back into the kitchen, gabbed a kuffe, and sought out Bertholette in the dining-room, swearing to have revenge. There was a short hand to hand combat. Bertholette drew a revolver, fired a shot at the walter, missed him and was stabled in the arm. Mrs. 'olwell called to her husband: "Jump!" He obeyed and she fainted. While she was being carried to her room upstairs a policeman arrested the offending Colosante, and quiet was restored.

Mrs. Colwell hay awake at night after the other inmates of the house were asleep. Presently she awake her husband and declared that gas was escaping somewhere near them. He examined the gas fixtures and said they were all right. Mrs. Colwell was not satisfied, but she bore with the smell of gas until yesterday morning. Then it was discovered that John Ducrete, the new cook employed by flartholetts on Friday, had been suffocated by escaping gas in the adjoining room. The gas fixture there had two openings, one of them connected with a cooking apparents, and there are separate stops for each opening. Ducrete did not understand the arrangement and lett one of the stops open. He was dead in the morning. Mrs. Colwell fainted again when she heard of his death. The Metal Exchange was disturbed yesterday only by the rattle of the Third Avenue Railroad trains. The bears broke the corner, masticating 1,000,000 pounds at their first bite, and it is estimated that it will take them about three or four years to digest their big mest. The estimates of the faikure published in some of the papers were far from the actual figures. Additional interviews obtained yesterday confirmed the estimate given in The Tribune yesterday. Corwith & o. are thought to have falled for $400,000 or $500,000. Gurden Corwith is said to have lost $100,000.

AN ACTOR ARRESTED BY COMSTOCK,

HE IS CHARGED BY AN ENEMY WITH EXHIBIT-ING IMPROPER PICTURES.

Charles L. Davis, the actor, was arrested and held for trial at the Tombs Court yesterday for exhibiting matter appears to be another phase of the trouble beon the "Rialto" and the former asked Davis to give peculiar problems requiring investigation that are constantly presenting themselves, upon which medical clothing and fed him, but paid his room rent and in other ways assisted him. One day Myerson asked Davis for the loan of a couple of his diamonds, as he wanted to see one of the Frohmans about an engagement. Davis loaned him a diamond pin and ring. Myerson did not return them. He told mutual friends that Davis ewed him money and he would keep the diamonds as security. Myerson afterward admitted to a Headquarters detective that Davis did not owe him anything, but that he was indebted to Davis. Then he was arrested for the larceny of the diamonds and Detective Hanley subsequently found them in pawnshop.

Myerson went to Anthony Comstock a few days ago and said that Day's had in his possession some improper photographs. Comstock secured a search warrant and went up to the Morton House vesterday. He caught Day's at breakfast. Upon stating his mission Day's immediately went up to his room, opened his trunk and rave up the pictures. They were photographic pictures of French art.

When a reporter asked Mr. Comstock about the case, he very curtly said there were particular reasons why he did not care to say anything about it. Justice O'Reilly held Day's for trial in $1,000 bail. Through Lawyer John Hoyer he pleaded not guilty and waived examination.

The American Institute Fair is in its third week, and additions which are made to the exhibits add to the interest taken in it by people who have made it a point to find out what the institute does each year. There is a contrast in the present and recent exhibitions with what the fairs were some years ago. This is natural, and while some of the ponderous features may be lacking, the reason for their absence is strong enough to satisfy visitors. In the machinery department alone there are nearly 100 exhibits. Each one has some special recommendation to a study by the mechanic who intends to use it, or the capitalist who needs it. All this, and much in addition, is to be seen, and the result of the twenty-five cents admission leaves nothing yet to be done to make the exhibition of this year satisfactory.
